GESSS-WA 2018

The highly successful inaugural GESSS-WA was held on the 29th of November at the University of Western Australia. The event showcased graduate students from Curtin University, the University of Western Australia and Murdoch University presenting diverse earth science research with 52 talks and a poster session.

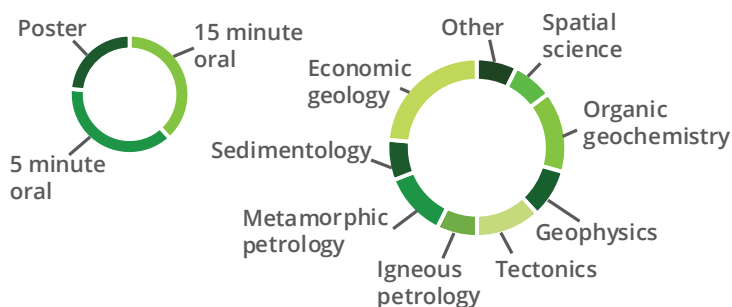

Promoting collaboration between academia and industry remains a key aim for GESSS-WA.

Earth Science in WA

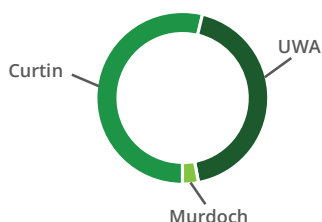

- GESSS-WA 2018 was largely successful due to the generous support of WA industry and research partners
- The range of earth science research areas and topics showcased during GESSS-WA spanned the globe and highlighted the importance of earth science research in Western Australia

GESSS-WA 2018 feedback

GESSS-WA 2018 was extremely successful, especially considering it was the first year the event has ever been run in Western Australia. We received glowing feedback from GESSS-WA delegates

“Good experience for presenters. Excellent networking”

Industry-student interaction

- Provided the opportunity for engagement between industry representatives, students, leading university researchers and GSA members.
- Students gained experience from discussions with industry representatives and researchers putting their work into a broader context
- Facilitated industry visibility to a pool of highly qualified student delegates

“Very well organised & run. On a par with some professional conferences”

In 2018, GESSS-WA secured funding to the tune of $15,000 from industry leading organisations including Iluka Resources, IGO, Rio Tinto, UWA, Curtin, Geoconferences WA, Quadrant Energy, CSIRO, TIGeR, CET, CCFS, GSWA, CSA Global, ASEG and AngloGold Ashanti.

A major aim of GESSS-WA is to ensure it is accessible to as many people as possible. To make this possible, registration for the conference is free of charge for all students, staff, and GSA members. Total registrations for GESSS-WA exceed 150 delegates.

In order to create a professional conference experience for our delegates, we secure state of the art on-campus venues, delicious meals and an impressive sundowner.

Generous support from industry and research partners in 2018 allowed GESSS-WA to be presented as a highly reputable, and successful event. Our goal is to present GESSS-WA 2019 to a standard that exceeds last year's event.
